

New Avenues (digitally influenced fine art) september 23 - november 12, 2010

juried by: David Hamill, MFA San Francisco Art Institute. His work has been shown across the Bay Area, in national and international venues and is currently part of a touring exhibition in Australia entitled "Colliding Islands." Numerous Awards have been awarded to Mr. Hamill including a grant from the Pollock-Krasner Foundation.

Requirements

- 2D and 3D works using digital manipulation
- traditional photography using digital mediums is discouraged
- All media will be considered - original works only
- San Francisco Bay Area Artists only (must live within 100 miles of San Rafael CA)
- Technology has a long history of influencing how artists create their work. This show seeks to explore how the advent of the personal computer and image manipulation software has opened up entirely new avenues of image making. We are looking for work that could not have been envisioned without the use of a computer. It does not need to be involved in the entirety of the process, but should be integral to it. The exhibition is open to all media including digital prints as well as traditional methods. Time based art will be considered, but please note that the gallery does not have the equipment to display it and you would need to provide the source player (computer, DVD, etc) as well as a monitor should your work be chosen for inclusion. Along with images of your work please include a brief description of your process.
